“And suddenly you know: It’s time to start something new and trust the magic of beginnings.”

Have you ever wondered how the beginning of the New Academic Session beautifully coincides with the onset of Spring?

For what else could better represent new hopes and aspirations than the very season that is an embodiment of rebirth and renewal.

April marks a different sort of new year in the lives of the students; it's new because in a way, it's a pretext of starting afresh. It's an opportunity to put in practice all the lessons we learnt and to implement the promise that we made to ourselves at the beginning of the year; the promise to do better and be better.

It's the promise of Spring that old has to give way to new, that what could not bloom and blossom in the cold drifts of winter, will flourish and flower in the gentle breeze of Spring. So, if you decide to become a version of yourself that is a doer rather than a dreamer then you owe it to yourself to take a chance.

As we welcome you all to this new academic session with full hearts and a renewed sense of purpose, we hope that you all will find your footing in this new journey and that you will embrace curiosity and a sense of wonderment. As we grow older, we move away from our inner child who never ceases to be enchanted with the world around. We inherit a sense of apathy towards what we believe we cannot change and hence we stop asking questions. This year ask those questions, take a chance and you might just be surprised at what lies hidden beneath the cloak of indifference.

Although a lot of things might be new in our lives right now, from bags to books, from ideas to concepts, but some things are constant: the examination process. It is imperative to acknowledge that in the absence of formal assessments, one loses the motivation to persevere, strive and excel. So, to ensure that we start the new session on the right note, we have the upcoming May Pen and Paper examination. We wish the students all the very best, and hope that the resolutions that they set for themselves at the beginning of the year will hold steadfast, paving a way for them to be a version of themselves that is constantly learning, thriving and evolving.
